Rebecca Blackman

Arts Council England

Rebecca is the National Director for Engagement and Communities as well as an Area Director for the Midlands based in Nottingham. She has previously worked as a project leader for an National Health Service advice and counselling project; as a Senior Manager for Advice Services in local government and as a teacher of English and Drama in a London Comprehensive School. She has also worked as an actor/teacher with various theatre companies in York, Leeds and Nottingham. Rebecca has delivered training programmes for Age UK and worked in a voluntary capacity with Shelter and in youth justice settings. She is currently leading on both the national Creative People and Places programme, as well as Arts Councils work with older people, alongside working on a wide range of engagement and community projects.
